III. WRITING (10 POINTS)

The editor of your school magazine is inviting students to write about successful people. Write the story of a successful person you know (relative, friend, neighbour, star ...).

09/50 When I have been given this task by the school editor, I thought of so many people. Yet, there's only one person that's worth writing about. He goes by the name "Dad", but others call him Salah. He's a 61 years old retired French teacher, and in my eyes my dad's a very successful person. Knowing that I appreciate the intellectual force rather than the material possessions in people. For true success comes with knowledge. My father has been my idol ever since I became conscious of my surroundings, for I was amazed by the number of languages he has mastered. A couple of years ago, my dad won a medalion for his great work ethics and his marvelous grade given to him by the regional inspector. I recall a few years back a bunch of people visiting my father and hugging him whilst smiling, they would all say the same things: "If it wasn't for you sir, I wouldn't be standing here", my dad would automatically have a wide smile on his bearded face. His close friends nicknamed him "The walking dictionary" for he knows the definition of every French word.

To sum it, I very much admire my father and my greatest hope is to grow up and become just as brilliant and smart as him. Because I learned from him how to make the right decision involving my life, and that's why I'll forever be grateful to him.
